ARCHITECTURE AND THE URBAN IN SPANISH FILM

Edited by Susan Larson
Architecture and the Urban in Spanish Film

Edited by
Susan Larson

intellect
Bristol, UK / Chicago, USA
Contents

List of Figures vii
Acknowledgments xii
Introduction: Architecture, the Urban and the Critical Possibilities of Spanish Film Studies
Susan Larson

PART 1: ARCHITECTURE AND THE URBAN 21

   Benjamin Fraser 22

2. Establishing Shots as Urban Blueprints in Spanish Feature Films
   Jorge Gorostiza 38

PART 2: MOBILITY 61

3. The Rhythm of the Modern City: Traffic and Mobility in Spanish Film, 1896–1939
   Nuria Rodríguez-Martín 62

4. Childhood Spectacle, Modernity and Madrid as a Dystopic City: Luis Lucia’s Cerca de la ciudad (1952)
   David Foshee 81

5. Elevators and the Poetics of Vertical Mobility in Spanish Film
   Tom Whittaker 96
PART 3: SURFACE TENSIONS 113
6. An Archi-Texture of Pleasure: The Verbena, the Modistilla and the Mantón de Manila in Rosa de Madrid (1927) 114
   Juli Highfill
7. Surface Tension and Utopian Underworlds: Orpheus and the Executioner in Luis García Berlanga’s El verdugo (1963) 132
   Patricia Keller

PART 4: THE EVERYDAY 155
8. Mediating Everyday Life: Domestic Architecture in Spanish Film 156
   Josefina González Cubero and Alba Zarza-Arribas
   Emeterio Diez Puertas and María de Arana Aroca

PART 5: MEMORY AND THE MONUMENTAL 207
10. Who and What Was José Antonio Nieves Conde Criticizing in the Film El inquilino (1957)? 208
    Susan Larson and Carlos Sambricio
11. Madrid 1964: Icon of Modernity or City of Memory? A Look at the ‘Details’ 223
    Vicente Sánchez-Biosca
    Samuel Amago

PART 6: THE VIRTUAL 259
13. Uncanny Urbanism and Generational Shifts in Carlos Marques Marèt’s 10.000km and Anchor and Hope 260
    Leigh Mercer
14. Dead to Capitalism: Zombified Territory and Junkie Spaces in Cabanyal Z, or How to Unleash Monstrous Creativity in the Urban 276
    Stephen Luis Vilaseca

Notes on Contributors 296
Index 303